

Where's My Type?

In Python

X = 0

Where's My Type?

Variables in Python are dynamically-typed: declared without an explicit type

However, objects have a type, so Python knows the type of a variable, even if you don't