

Where's My Type?

In Python

Where's My Type?

Variables in Python are dynamically-typed: declared without an explicit type
However, objects have a type, so Python knows the type of a variable, even if you don't